

eSports Yearbook 2009

During the last months the eSports Yearbook team has been talking to eSports celebrities from all around the globe. Most have been very enthusiastic about the eSports Yearbook, which is a self-financing project.

People can still write to contact@esportsyearbook.com to contribute their articles, opinions and photos until December 10th 2009. All eSports players, managers and journalists are welcome.

To sweeten the waiting for this amazing book to appear on amazon, Julia Christophers and Tobias Scholz, the yearbook founders, would like to give you a glimpse of what is in this book so far:

Matthias „Losemann“ Beyer is writing about a night to remember in China after the World eSports Masters. David „R0ck3r“ Donschen is analyzing ESWC's failure. Jean-Christophe „Lobo“ Arnaud is writing about the fascination and passion involved in eSports. Alessandro „stermy“ Avallone will give you insights into his eSports career, from the beginning to nowadays. Fabian „FeLiPE“ Meßner will be working on a page about fragster and his time at this project.

Marius Radu will be writing about the World Cyber Games in Cologne and about the time when he just had joined Turtle Entertainment.

David „affentod“ Hiltcher will be tackling the question of the success of Counter-Strike.

Prof. Dr. Christian Scholz had a look at the effect WoW could have on your career entry.

Tobias Scholz will be writing about the World Cyber Games in 2004 and the Xfire Release Party.

There is not going to be any more whistle-blowing, but if you would like to know what else is going on at the yearbook, and who will be on board together with Fatal1ty and Spawn, you might would like to pay www.esportsyearbook.com a visit.

Additionally, the team is looking for famous eSports quotes, quotes that mirror our fascination for eSports and gaming. If you remember any quotes, please also send them to contact@esportsyearbook.com. There will be a page dedicated to the best quotes in the book.

Everybody offering their help to the eSports Yearbook production will be mentioned in the book!
